VINCE VAUGHN IS NOT A DOUCHE: WHO THE BEARS SHOULD TAKE IN FIRST ROUND OF THE DRAFT

Hey good lookin'!

Oh sorry about that, I wasn't talking to you, I was talking to the person behind you. Have you ever been in that situation? Where you think someone waves at you but they're actually waving at someone behind you? Or worse, when you start talking to someone on the street but then realize that they're actually talking to someone else on a Bluetooth headset? And really, what's with Bluetooth headsets anyway. Are phones really that heavy that people can't hold them up their heads?

Remember this douchy bad guy from Resident Evil: Apocalypse? No? Good.

At any rate, the point is that sometimes you think you've made a connection with someone, and it turns out it was just a bad misinterpretation. Like when the Jets traded up to the fifth pick to select Mark Sanchez as their franchise quarterback. Unless "franchise quarterback" means "total bust that will be best remembered for the butt fumble", in which case, mission accomplished, Jets.

Well, the 2014 NFL Draft is almost upon us and it's time once again to talk about who the Chicago Bears should take in the first round.

Round 1

Bears - Pick 14

As I mentioned in my articles on who the Bears Kept, Ditched and Picked Up, the Bears defense was in need of an overhaul. In free agency, they picked up a few defensive tackles, but there's room to grow elsewhere, particularly in the secondary.

Ha Ha Clinton-Dix - S - Alabama

I saw Ha Ha Clinton-Dix play significant minutes at Alabama covering the field sideline to sideline. Heck, watching him in the game against Notre Dame was downright demoralizing. So I can truly say that he's a safety that can make a difference. If he's around in first round at 14, he'd be a steal.

Justin Gilbert - CB - Oklahoma State

Getting a good corner may also be a good idea. And if Justin Gilbert is around, then he may be a good add. Perhaps he's not ideal as he doesn't jam particularly well and he's isn't very physical but he has a good combination of size and speed and a good nose for hawking the ball.

Calvin Pryor - S - Louisville

And if Clinton-Dix isn't around, Calvin Pryor could be a good choice at safety. Pryor doesn't pull out the stops, playing sideline to sideline at full speed. This aggressiveness sometimes leads to problematic angles in coverage, but ultimately, that's something he can learn to correct.

C. J. Mosely - ILB - Alabama

What, another Bama guy? As much as it pains me to say, Alabama had a great defense, so I'll take any part of that for my struggling Bears defense. Mosely was a very productive player at Alabama, but also frequently injured. It'll be a real risk, but if Mosely can stay on the field, he can be a real difference maker and may be a good pick at 14.

Agree? Disagree? Sound off and let me know! Oh, no, I'm talking to you, I'm talking to that guy behind you. Sorry about that.
